WEAVER'S ENTHUSIASM REFLECTS IN ITS MANY FACES

The story of the Class of '67 is the story of its many faces. The face of study, the face of anxiety, the face of fun, the face of excitement — these change as quickly as disappointments change to joy. This was the year that seniors rejoiced with the football team which boasted an undefeated season and wept with Weaver's outstanding basketball team which fell to Hartford High. This was the year when the inexpressible joy of four snow days tempered the endless monotony of marking period exams and term papers. This was the year that disheartening rejections brought by stiff competition were foiled by numerous acceptances. Most significantly of all, this was the year that the face of the senior became the face of maturity as seniors took the lead in Weaver life. Howie Greenblatt assumed the presidency of Student Council, Dona Summers coordinated all senior activities, Paul Spector edited the best Lookout in history, and Elyse Cramer headed both the cheerleaders and Girls' League. On the sports scene meanwhile, Phil Fugge, Ray Kitchens, Jewett Newkirk, Ben Matthews and Wayne Jones captained Weaver's winning teams. Not only these students, but the entire senior class exemplified leadership for the novice underclassmen; in studies, as well as activities and jobs, the seniors have led the way toward maturity. By accepting its responsibilities and overcoming challenges, the Class of '67 has made the transition from adolescence to adulthood.

THE FACE OF STUDY INVOLVES EFFORT

Sheila Rose checks PORTAL lists.

The face of work brings forth the more serious aspects of student life at Weaver. In an art class, Cathy O'Loughlin ambitiously attempts to learn the rudiments of perspective, while Mrs. Gubitz's senior math class concerns itself with complicated calculations. Suzanne Ratner, a future woman of the business world, practices office filing while young men of the Audio Visual Squad familiarize themselves with the latest equipment.

In addition to the work the students do in school, many work part-time in insurance companies, banks, department stores, and countless other places of business. Some of them, in working part-time, are gaining experience in the fields that they will pursue upon graduation. Others are working to earn money for their personal needs and to save for their future education.

THE FACE OF FUN SPARKLES WITH LIVELY VITALITY

The face of fun allows for a degree of relaxation in student life. These are times when books and intellect must be cast aside.

Fun for the average Weaverite is as diverse as the students themselves. Nancy Neckes, Rusty Kaplan, Ed Lebetkin, and Jay Wish enjoy nothing more than an underhanded parchisi game down in the Lookout room. This helps them wear off the frustration of classes and exercise their wits at the same time. Fun for Elyse Cramer, a girl who loves to dance, is the excitement of the Kickoff Dance with her date. Rusty Kaplan and Bobby Sheketoff take pleasure in their gossip sessions down in the locker bay. The F.T.A. brought on a new diversion with their display of stuffed animals. They were harassed by loads of females every morning who battled over the right to purchase the last "Danny Doll" or the last Humpty Dumpty.

The face of fun has been as important in the lives of the seniors as has been that of work. In enjoyment, they have learned the basis for living with other people and maintaining good relationships.

PORTAL DEDICATED TO MISS BELISLE AND MR. PREU

A woman with a bubbling, sparkling personality is seen rushing down the hall to begin her day's work. Countless students smile automatically as she approaches.

Now and then a frustrated young girl will grab her in a corner and tell her of the latest tragedy. Her time is precious, but she manages to listen and give her priceless counsel.

She now heads for her official abode, her office, to face the mountains that lie before her. She becomes engrossed in her work and suddenly it's 2:30. She collects a stack of papers and heads homeward to continue the many jobs which fill her day.

The Class of '67 dedicates its yearbook to this woman, Miss R. Jeannine Belisle.

Purpose and serenity follow this man who is walking down Weaver's halls. He enters a nearby classroom and begins with his usual, "Now class . . ." An expression of contentment crosses his face, for he is now doing what pleases him most. He stops momentarily in his tour around the room to praise his students' creativity.

Perhaps his most important contribution is that this man teaches his students appreciation for beauty, both on canvas and in the world itself.

The bell sounds and he dismisses a class that has become more enriched in the course of forty-five minutes.

To this man, Mr. John D. Preu, the Class of '67 gratefully dedicates its yearbook.

Miss Belisle poses with Mimi Wheeler, Andi Attas, Charlie Brown and others.

The face of activities is the face of participation and leadership. Through the various clubs, seniors have worked and laughed together.

COUNCIL HEADS ORGANIZATIONS

Designed to bring order out of chaos, the Student Council heads the diversified clubs at Weaver. When the students demand a dance, who plans it? The Student Council. When money has to be collected for Thi Ut, the foster child, who is responsible? The Student Council. When a committee has to be formed, who forms it? The Student Council. Directed by Howie Greenblatt, the Council serves as the stable force of Weaver life.

Appealing to the feminine tastes, the Girls' League sponsored a fashion show of shifts, pant-suits and formal gowns, dinners, bingo parties and a movie, "The Notorious Landlady." The men of Weaver find their answer in the Boys' Club which added an innovation, the Faculty-POP Game, to their annual pencil drive. Despite the talent of Woody Roberts, Lee Baby Sims and Chicken Man, the male faculty triumphed and added substantial cash to the coffers of the Boys' Club.

PORTAL '67 PLANNED BY YEARBOOK STAFF

If one were to enter Room 227 late on a Friday, the Portal Editorial Board could be found hard at work. The Board was under the supervision of editor-in-chief, Olivia Pittman, and faculty adviser, Miss Kathleen Gallagher. Russell Kaplan, business manager, and his board were responsible for the large number of ads. The credit for photography and the art work goes to a dedicated junior, Phillip Garbus.

Led by Sheila Sondik, president, and Miss Donna Adcock, faculty adviser, the Weaver Chapter of the National Honor Society sold "Beat Hartford High" tags, compiled the playbill for Weaver Night, and ran a "guess the beans" game. These fund-raising projects provided a graduating senior with a college scholarship.

LOOKOUT FUNCTIONS AS

The core of the school and the mouthpiece for administrative and student issues and grievances, the Lookout encourages the free interplay of ideas and stimulates greater student participation in vocational and academic activities. A group of fun-loving people, its staff enlightens its readers as to the problems and controversies of the school, community and nation. Mr. Spencer Schaller, business board adviser, has been a vital asset to the monthly publication. The editorial board adviser, Mr. S. Robert Italia, an enthusiastic teacher possessing more spirit than most students, inspired the Lookout staff to create a better paper.

WEAVER MOUTHPIECE

This year, under the supervision of Miss Eluned Roberts and Mr. Italia, the Lookout sponsored a new project, AGORA. Described as "provocative, witty, informative, and soul," AGORA featured informal discussions in a coffee house atmosphere. The AGORA project proved to be successful because of all those who became actively involved. Subjects discussed ranged from religion and integration to modern African art.

DRAMATIC CLUB STAGES "THE NIGHT OF JANUARY 16"

The Weaver thespians again delighted their audience with this year's performance, "The Night of January 16," a courtroom drama which enabled the audience to participate in the action by being members of the jury. Miss Ann Nelson, Dramatic Club adviser, successfully directed and encouraged the actors and actresses. Through many frustrating evening rehearsals, the players learned the basics of the theater as well as how to maintain their poise in the face of crisis. Those who worked behind the scenes deserve as much credit as the actors, for without its devoted stage crew, the Dramatic Club could not have functioned as smoothly as it did. As the Bard once phrased it, "The play's the thing . . ."

This year's delegation to the Junior City Council consisted of four seniors: Jesse Goldstein, Russell Kaplan, Rashelle Townsend, and Edgar Teale. Working under the able leadership of Mr. Paul Coons, they strove to solve the problems of the schools, including the expansion of the Driver's Education Program and the exemption of the lower class students of B+ averages from finals. The council may not have accomplished all of its original goals, but its members did learn the basics of city government, how to run the community for the benefit of the citizens.

The Foreign Policy Association, guided by the helpful advice of Mr. Bradford Ames, enjoyed another successful year. As in the past, the F.P.A. traveled to the United Nations to learn about the importance of this powerful organization. Club members also learned about the many jobs the U.N. performs. A few fortunate F.P.A. members were able to spend a week in Washington, D.C., where they observed senators at work, visited famous landmarks, and had an all-around marvelous time.

CLUBS PROBE CAREERS

This year the Weaver Future Teachers' Association became an active school organization. The year's activities were begun under the guidance of a new adviser, Mrs. Marie Gubitz, with a lecture by Miss Donna Adcock. Club members also held a lively Christmas party, a stuffed animal sale for the Connecticut Society for Crippled Children and Adults, and a candy sale. On the final day of exams in January, the F.T.A. sponsored a luncheon with Mr. Curtis of the American School for the Deaf as guest speaker. Another F.T.A. project was the Student Teacher Exchange Day held on Valentine's Day. This was the first time in many years opportunity to teach their own classes. The year's activities were closed by a trip to New York and a cookout.

The highlight of the year's activities for the Girls' Business Club was the reunion held early in the year. Girls who were senior members last year and have since entered the world of business were invited to see their alma mater. They talked with this year's members and gave the girls a hint of what their future might hold. The Christmas party held in December was a success. The final event of the year was a field trip in the late spring.

CURRICULUM ENRICHED BY A.V.A.

An enthusiastic and boisterous group of boys, the forty members of the Audio-Visual Aids Association, led by captain David Baker and co-captain Steven Demirjian and advised by Mr. Szandrocha, run projectors to show films, instruct teachers in the use of overhead projectors, and even wash cars in the parking lot to raise money. The boys' most cherished possession is the new photocopy machine which is found in the library.

One organization which involves quite a lot of mental exertion is the Chess Club. Captained by Herbert Pick, the Chess Club had a winning season. Highlights of the season were a meet with Conard which ended in a tie, and a shut-out of East Hartford High.

Undeniably the most humanitarian of all clubs of Weaver is the Junior Red Cross. This year the Junior Red Cross, advised by Mrs. Alice Burstein and Mrs. Barbara Straite, expanded its annual program. Led by President Brenda Mitchell, the club made baskets for the poverty-stricken people at Thanksgiving, and Christmas caroled at the Oak Hill School for the Blind. Expansion came as the Junior Red Cross staff, working in conjunction with the community on the Head Start Project, tutored children on the elementary level.

MUSICAL ORGANIZATIONS BRIGHTEN SONGLESS DAYS

Some of the most colorful aspects of rallies or football games are the stirring marches played by the band. Under the supervision of Mr. Arthur Levine, the band aids the cheerleaders, injects spirit into a crowd, and boosts the morale of game players. On many cold winter mornings band members can be seen rushing to an eight o'clock rehearsal with instruments tucked under their arms, or, during the football season, marching up and down the football field during first period. Their lively music will be remembered by many studious first period classes.

The versatility of the choir can be seen in its musical repertoire. From classics to popular tunes, the choir, under the direction of Mrs. Elizabeth Martin, performs at many school functions. Members of the group have also participated in many inter-high, inter-city, and inter-state choirs. One can often hear a notice on the P.A. system: The choir will meet tomorrow at 8:00 a.m. and period one in room 168.

The orchestra, under the direction of Mr. Clayton Shufelt, is another school musical organization. Many mornings before school light melodies can be heard emanating from the auditorium. If one were to look inside, a group of students could be seen on the stage, intently watching their music and the conductor. This group would be the orchestra. The outstanding member of the orchestra this year is undoubtedly Nancy Grant. An accomplished violinist, Nancy had the honor of playing with the Hartford Symphony Orchestra at Weaver as guest soloist.

CO-CURRICULAR CIRCLES MIX STUDY WITH PLEASURE

Students who wish to extend their academic interest in clubs can do so in Weaver. The Latin Club, advised by Mr. Joseph Hilbert, with Marla Cohen as president, conducted discussion groups on the history of the language, as well as its present status in the world.

Students in and out of the art department can develop their skills and interest in the Art-Crafts Club, advised by Mr. John Preu. Diane Korduner, president, arranged lectures with Weaver alumni on their position in the art world. A trip to New York was taken, where popular museums were visited.

The Biology Club, advised by Mr. Gilbert Stuart, developed the members into well-informed adults. President Steven Mastronarde and other members were rewarded with discussions on the internal and external features of animals.

Students interested in the German language and culture can pursue their interests in the German Club, advised by Mr. Fritz Tietze. The German Club provided an atmosphere for students to further study the German culture and make them well-rounded citizens.

GROUPS COMBINE WORK AND STUDY

Among school organizations which prepare students for jobs are Work Study, Work Training, and Distributive Education (DECA). Mr. Ralph Worth, director of the Work Study Program, has found jobs for many juniors and seniors in insurance companies, department stores, and small businesses. Sophomores are involved in an orientation program. Another program which finds students at part time work is Work Training, under the direction of Mrs. Ferguson. Students in this program get practical work experience in many places, including the Hartford schools.

A new course introduced this year is Distributive Education and its related club, DECA. Headed by Mr. Theodore Perry, DECA offers students a course in retail selling and related work experience. Students have sold candy to raise money for a banquet.

THE GREATEST CHAMP VISITS THE GREATEST SCHOOL

On December 9, 1966, at 10:30 on a Tuesday morning, the students of Weaver were shocked by the unexpected visit of the Heavyweight Champion of the World, Muhammed Ali, otherwise known as Cassius Clay. Muhammed Ali was on his way to Bradley Field when he decided to visit the students at Weaver.

During Muhammed Ali's thirty minute visit there was excitement everywhere. He was protected from the frenzied crowd of students by Mr. Nicholas Coracci, Vice-Principal. His greetings ranged from, "Hi ya, brother" to "Here I am in living color." Muhammed Ali left behind the impression of good looks, poise and good grace. December 9 will be known as the day Muhammed Ali brought the "Ali Shuffle" to Weaver.

SENIORS WITH SOUL DANCE TO THE MOTOWN SOUND

On April 9, 1966, the Junior Class held its most important social event of the year. Entitled "Paris in the Springtime," the prom scene was decorated to resemble a sidewalk cafe in Paris. Center pieces were Eiffel Towers on the tables and the dance floor was encircled with wrought iron railings. The girls in their formal gowns and the boys in their white dinner jackets nervously passed through the receiving line on their way to the dance floor where seniors danced to the Motown sound provided by Weaver's own M.J.B. +1. This lovely evening was arranged by co-chairmen, Cathy Barlow and Charlene Clinton. The highlight of the evening was the crowning of the queen and her court. Anticipation gave way to excitement as the name of Elyse Cramer, radiant and smiling, was read as the Queen of the 1966 Junior Prom.

The first dance of the school year was held before Turkey Day. Designed to inspire the team on to a victory over Hartford High, the stars of the evening naturally were the football players. The theme was carried over into the table centerpieces which were small footballs. Music was again provided by the M.J.B. +1.

CHEERLEADERS BOOST TEAM SPIRITS; RALLY EAGER BEAVERS ON TO VICTORY

Elyse Cramer, captain.

What is the liveliest group of Weaverites? The cheerleaders. Who are the girls who make a rally sparkle? The cheerleaders. Captained by Elyse Cramer and Jackie McKinney, the girls put in long hours of hard work practicing jumps and cheers to prevent mistakes at rallies. All of this practice made our cheerleaders tops. They took every opportunity to show off their stunts and always succeeded in thrilling the spectators.

Basketball and football games could never be quite the same without the girls in green and white. They will always be remembered as a potent force in urging our team on to victory.

FOOTBALL TEAM SWEEPS CDC FOR UNDEFEATED SEASON

The football season of 1966 was a precedent setting period. Led by senior tri-captains Phil Fugge, James Allen, and Ray Kitchens, the Beavers won the City Series and also the Capital District Conference.

Coached by Ted Knurek, the Beavers spent many afternoons in scrimmages at Batterson Field. Displaying evidence of their power in these scrimmages, the team promptly obliterated their first two opponents of the season.

Next the game which must be considered the climax of the season came to pass. This was the game with the incumbent champion of the CDC, New Britain High. The big question was how much would Weaver lose by? The football team answered this question by upsetting the Hurricanes 22-0.

The end of the season came with a smashing 16-0 victory over arch-rival Hartford Public High School giving the Beavers their first undefeated football season marred only by a scoreless tie with East Hartford. Displaying a strong defense, a successful offense, and above all, team work, the Beavers carried the honors in the City Series and the Capital District Conference.

WINNING 17-3 BASKETBALL RECORD

The basketball season of 1967 turned out to be a year of mixed emotions. For Coach Frank Scelza's Weaver Beavers much joy could be found in their seventeen and three winning season. The seventeen wins included such uncertainties as two smashing victories over Bulkely, Norwich, and more particularly Hillhouse High of New Haven. Players who stood out at these triumphs included Ben Matthews, boasting a 19.4 average, Wayne Jones, versatile center with an 18.8 average, and Jewitt Newkirk, defensive ace, with a 9.8 average. Senior reserve guard Howie Greenblatt contributed heavily to these victories with his outstanding defensive playing. Unfortunately sorrow and frustration can be found in the losses to H.P.H.S. and a loss to Wilbur Cross. All in all, the 1967 season was an exciting, if not an undefeated season.

Despite defensive efforts, Wayne Jones adds another field goal.

CLUBS BACK ATHLETIC PROGRAM

Weaver's athletic program has certainly proven itself to be one of the top ranking in the state. Although academic study remains a factor of primary importance, the pursuit of practicing good sportsmanship and participation in athletic skills has always been encouraged.

Girls' Leader Corps has been helpful in teaching the girls athletic skills in gym classes, under the direction of Mrs. Marilyn Strong and Mrs. Aida Shumey. The Boys' Leader Corps has been an important factor in helping Mr. Scelza, Mr. Kearney, Mr. Knurek, and Mr. Wilson teach the boys' gym classes. The Letter Club, a conglomeration of Weaver athletes who have earned letters in one or more sports, helps encourage fair play in all aspects of student life.

ENTHUSIASTIC SKIERS HEAD

The Ski Club, advised by Mr. Gilbert Stuart, and captained by Donald Furman, had an excellent winter to pursue their sport. Ski conditions gave members many opportunities to go skiing during vacations and on weekends. For the Archery Club, 1967 was also an important year. Every Thursday afternoon, members of the club met to practice their skills in the Weaver gymnasium. The members of the club strove to hit a large target set up at regulation distance. The cry "bull's eye" was uttered by an excited club member who hit his first one of the day. All in all, the Archery Club had a successful year because members of all four classes participated actively.

FOR THE SLOPES

If one happened to venture into the gym on Thursday afternoons, the sight of girls dressed in black leotards would probably greet him. These girls, members of the Weaver Dance Club, would be performing interpretive modern dance. This year the club, advised by Mrs. Aida Shumey, again performed in Weaver Night. Also, this year a revived swimming team successfully completed its first year. Though discouraged by lack of a school swimming pool, the swim team made an impressive debut. Led by freestyle ace Ray Kitchens, and breastroker Lance Powell, the swimming team established a precedent for future Weaver swim teams to follow.

The DANCE CLUB includes Paula Patterson, Paulette Fox, and Sylvia Fox.

The Weaver Track and Cross Country teams have all the thrills and exciting moments of the Olympic games. There is much competition and great effort put into the various aspects of the teams. They are probably the only teams which require versatile performers. Frank Palmer battled out many races over the hurdles and contributed to the team's all around performances. In the various races, both Michael Wilkes and James Allen excelled and gave their all for the Green and White. Coach Colin T. Wilson helped the boys in preparing for the broad jump, javelin, and shot put events. All track and cross-country events help prepare the boys for competition in both sports and future work.

Keney Park, the home of Weaver's tennis team, serves as both a recreational and competitive spot. Ronald Berkowitz and John Pickney, co-captains, head the tennis team, one of the more fun-filled and exciting sports.

The face of the senior is the face of transition. Because of its many experiences, the Class of '67 will succeed in bridging the gap between school and careers.

DONA SUMMERS HEADS CLASS OF 1967

Senior Outing Chairman,
Janice Ashby

The class officers faced many obstacles in the year 1966-67. Led by Dona Summers, the class officers succeeded in overcoming each difficulty. An elaborate Senior Reception and a fun-filled class outing occupied the thoughts of every senior. Talkative but hard-working Rosemary Perkins dispelled doubts of every senior when Jackie McKinney employed a band playing both the soul sound and the west coast sound. Sophisticated Janice Ashby, chairman of the senior class outing eased all worries when she rented an excellent site for the outing. Charlene Clinton, trustworthy, not only paid all bills but managed to transform a slight deficit into a large profit. Fun-loving and athletic Phil Fugge not only led the class down the aisle but made the accomplishment of getting the seniors properly seated. Ronnie Berkowitz and Leah Turner, two seniors who are thoughtful and serious-minded students, succeeded in predicting not just a good but an excellent future for their fellow seniors. Smiling and active Carl Patterson and Susan Glasband read the last will and testament of the class. Jay Wish and Laurie Spector, chips off the leadership block, succeeded in being accurate historians. Paul Spector, forever a hard-working senior, vindicated the senior class by bringing every Lookout to press on time. Then there was Robert Sheketoff saying that all would be well. Somehow through all the trials and tribulations he was right.

ADMINISTRATIVE TRIUMVERATE COORDINATES ALL SCHOOL FUNCTIONS

The administration is the most instrumental factor in making Weaver a fine educational center, as well as a place where students can socialize freely. Consisting of Principal Ezra Melrose, Vice-Principal Nicholas Coracci, and Dean of Students Anita K. Roche, the faithful "triumverate" has proven itself a guiding light for students.

Mr. Ezra Melrose has taken charge of the numerous business and financial matters of the school. Never too busy to help a student to cope with his problems, Mr. Melrose is the type of man who inspires both admiration and respect, and makes the student want to reach toward goals worthy of his potential. His keen sense of fair play and optimism have helped to strongly enhance his gift of understanding.

Mr. Nicholas Coracci, alias Santa Claus, is a man of numerous talents. Recognized by some Weaverites as a local candy salesman, Mr. Coracci is also the man in charge of disciplinary offenders. To all students, however, Mr. Coracci is a congenial vice-principal, as well as a "pal." He will be remembered for his daily "words to the wise" and his genuine desire to encourage academic scholarship.

Reflecting the appearance of the "busy career woman," Miss Anita K. Roche, Dean of Students, is frequently seen occupied in the many tasks which her position entails. A most dedicated administrator, Miss Roche is never too busy to take time out to guide a student; when not advising committee chairmen on planning school dances and shows and meetings, she is projecting a warm, gracious smile, lighting up the sometimes obscured aspects of high school life.

Thus each member of the triumverate forms an integral part of the Weaver administration. The senior class greatly appreciates these three devoted people who truly contributed a great deal to making life at Weaver a profitable, unforgettable experience.

TRAVELS THROUGH MANY CENTURIES OF LITERATURE

in an interesting seminar.

With Mr. Albert V. DeBonis at its head, the English Department underwent significant modification this year. Through a project subsidized by federal funds, the department received instructional materials for reading, a library of reading books keyed to the interest of the individual students, large steel cabinets, dictionaries, and subscriptions to a number of colorful, informative magazines.

While the freshman class traveled to Startford to view the tragedy of Julius Caesar, the English Department sponsored a field trip to Beverly, Massachusetts, where sophomores, juniors and seniors enjoyed the performance of The Tempest. In so far as many changes took place in the English Department, this year was one of great alterations.

man), Miss Catherine Bailey, Miss Lucy Sullivan, Mr. William Pickens, Miss Kathleen Gallagher, Mrs. Rachel Margolis, Miss Elaine Bessett, and Mr. John Hendsey.

MUSIC DEPARTMENT: Mr. Clayton Shufelt, Mrs. Elizabeth Martin, and Mr. Arthur Levine.

ART DEPARTMENT: Mr. John Preu, Mr. Frank Mancuso, and Mr. Jay Ginewsky.

SENIORS COMMUNICATE THROUGH LANGUAGE AND ARTS

Always ready to broaden the knowledge of students are the foreign language teachers. Besides learning the language itself, students learn the culture, geography, and life of the country which they are studying. Magazines in foreign languages are one of the many aids used by the teachers to help students to better understand the language. Language labs are always fun, as well as educational. Stories from history and operas, plus grammar are some of the areas covered in the labs. Miss Frances Mullans, head of the department, and other teachers help in comparing our way of life to those of foreign countries. So, while Mr. Tietze yodels "yavol" and Mr. Hilbert discusses the glory that was Rome, Miss Mullans and Mr. Hendsey will continue to habla espanol — much to the delight of nos professeurs Monsieur Italia, Madame Mitnick, and Mesdemoiselles Buckley and Potter.

Imaginative students create works of art in classes headed by Mr. John D. Preu. From painting and sketching to ceramics and metal work, Weaver students are able to make interesting and beautiful things. Besides learning new techniques and the modern era of art, Weaverites learn the culture of the past periods of art and can evaluate them with the more modern trends. Art classes further the interest, creativity and imagination of pupils. Mr. Ginewsky's ceramics classes as well as Mr. Mancuso's art classes enhance the appreciation of the art of today as well as the art of the future. Their efforts have successfully helped Weaver to produce many young talented artists, designers, sculptors, and art teachers.

Whether learning a popular song or an old classic, learning or improvising on an instrument, or playing in the band or orchestra, the Weaver music department fulfills the musical needs of students. By participating at 8:00 A.M. and period one, the choir entertains at assemblies and other gatherings with ease and skill. Mrs. Elizabeth Martin, head of the department, helps pupils widen their horizons and makes them more aware of the changing world of music. Mrs. Martin's extreme devotion to the choir has inspired her "nightingales" to sing with deep "soul" — whether it's Handel's "Hallelujah Chorus" or the Weaver High School song.

FOREIGN LANGUAGE DEPARTMENT: Miss Margaret Potter, Mr. Robert Italia, Mrs. Regina Mitnick, Miss Frances Mullans, Mr. Joseph Hilbert, Miss Sharon Buckley, and Mr. Fritz Tietze.

HISTORY DEPARTMENT: Sitting (left to right Miss Marie MacDonnell, Miss Mary Ellen Long, Miss Hazel Fitting, Miss Gloria Garill, and Mrs. Marilyn Schwedel. (Stand-

HISTORY TRACES CIVILIZATION OF MAN

The personal, general, academic, and honors history classes put to good use the new study materials which were received by the History Department this year. Visual materials such as overhead projectors were used by historians who eagerly observed life from the western frontier to settled cities such as Hartford, and participated in worthwhile discussions.

This year the curriculum for the department was revised with an eye toward 1967-68. Mrs. Schwedel and Miss MacDonnell informed students concerning life in the "days of yore." Mr. Thomas again challenged his fourth period honors American History class with interesting descriptions of World War II as he himself saw it, and provoked captivating discussions of Time Magazine articles ranging from the Viet Nam crisis to birth control.

The study of history involves appreciation of the actions of our predecessors, whether it concerns a study of Negro history or the balance of the United States economy. The information acquired from the Weaver history professors will be useful to anyone who intends to live in today's fast moving society.

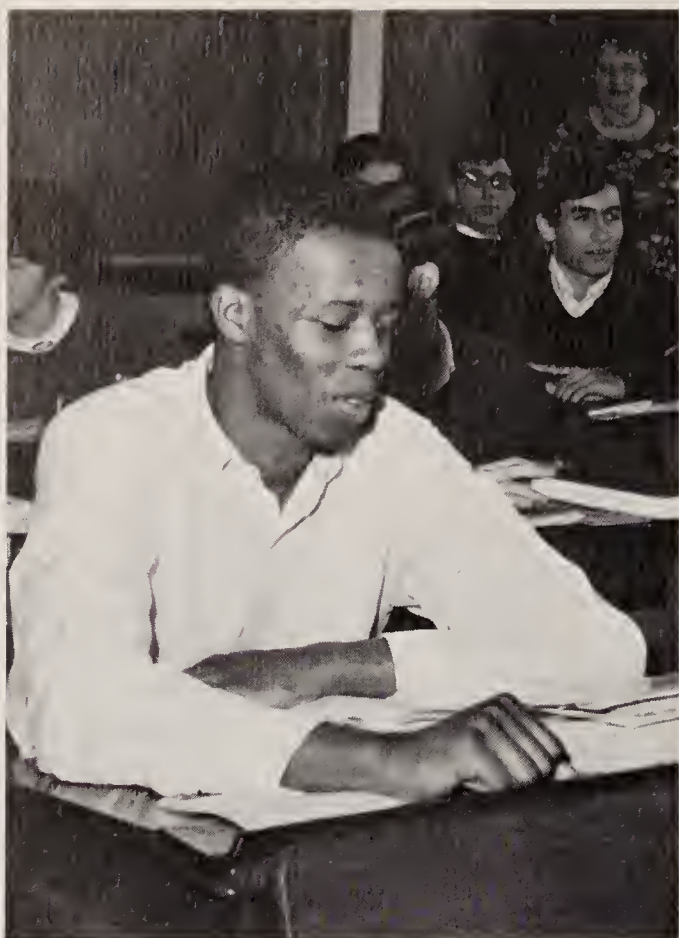

Answering question of history student, Jesse Goldstein, Miss MacDonnell appears in a cheerful mood.

Mr. Thomas divides his time by working on history and guidance.

History scholar, Leah Turner, shows her skills as she takes a test.

James Hairston studies math in Mrs. Gubitz's senior class.

Chemistry can be done as shown by David Baker, Theresa Kycia, Diane Korduner, Janis Leavitt, and Gregory Allen.

SCIENCE DEPARTMENT: (Bottom) Mr. Spencer Schaller, Mrs. Barbara Straite, Miss Elizabeth Sawyer (chairman), Mrs. Mary Jane Faulkner, Mr. Gilbert Stuart. (Top): Mrs. Annette Liljegan, Mr. Booker Holton, Mr. Merrill Davis, Mr. Thomas Straite, Mr. Lee Perandes.

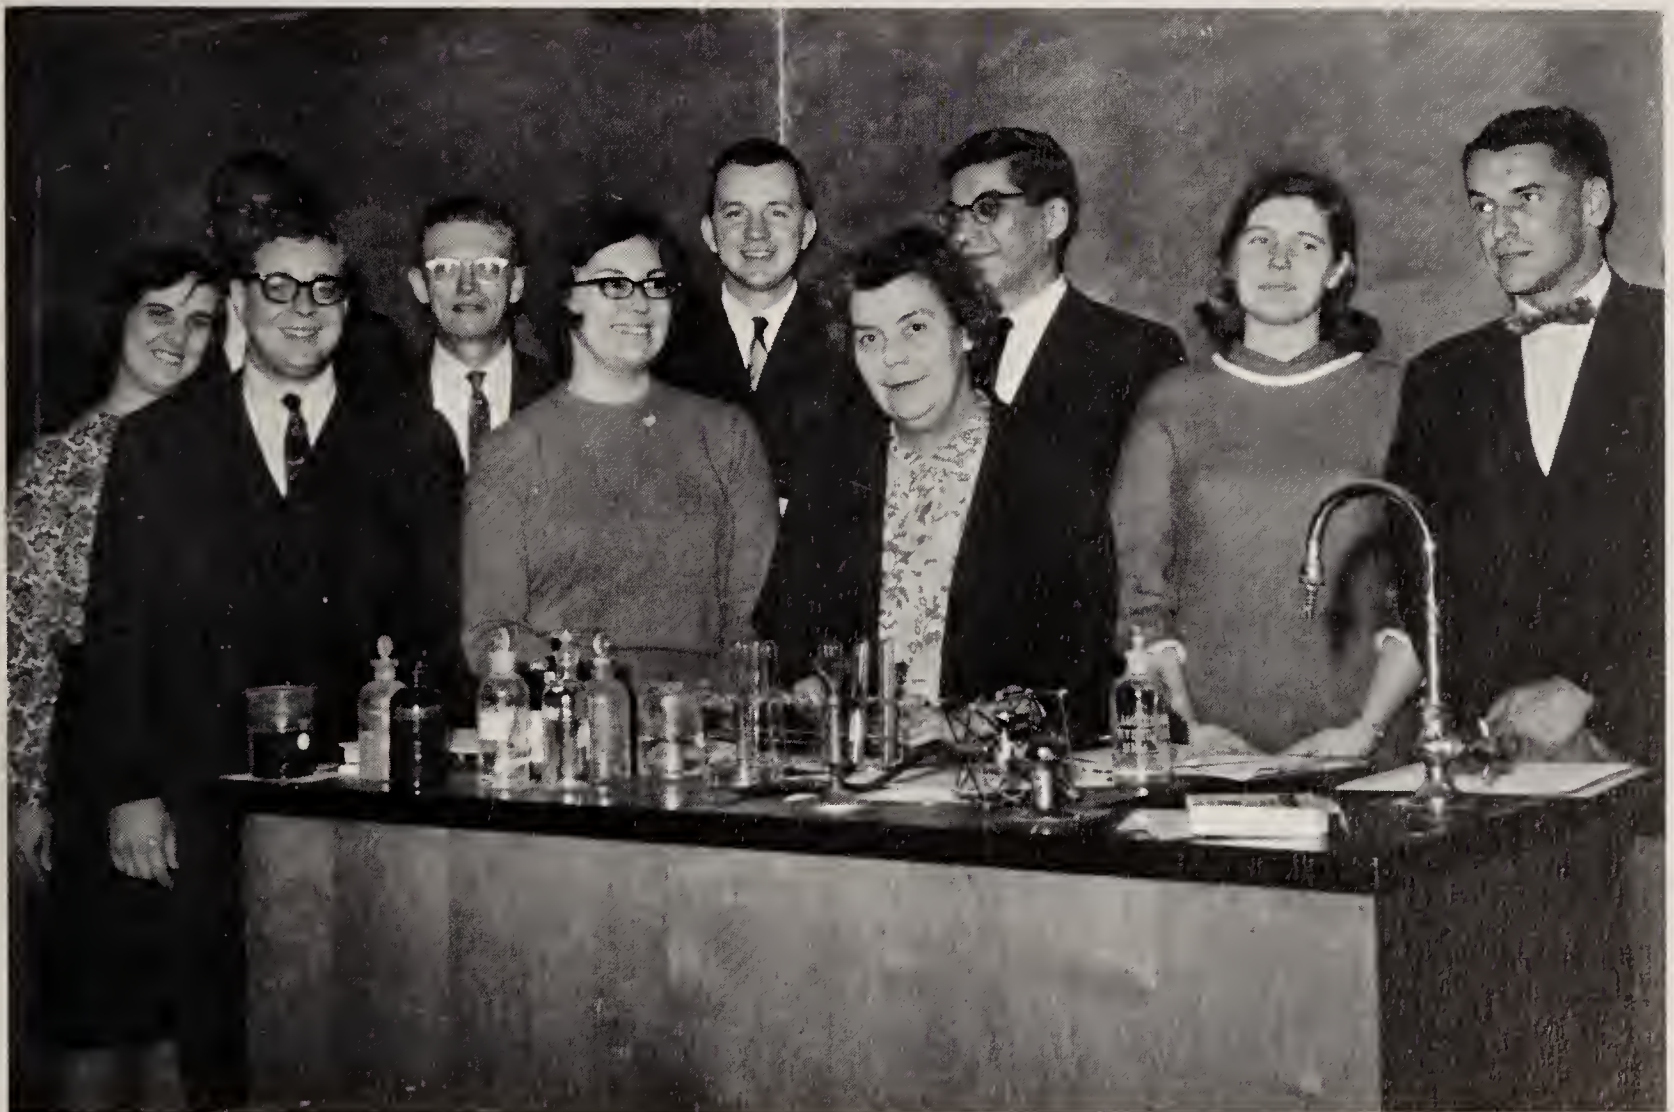

WEAVERITES DISCOVER JOYS OF THE SLIDE RULE

When it comes down to the final count, Weaver's Mathematics Department, is tops in the numbers racket. During the past four years, classmates have developed a near numerical numbness from such tasks as learning how to solve problems such as "How many apples are left in a basket after the Weaver football team has been around?" As the senior class looks back on its days at Weaver, adding memories, subtracting woes, dividing the paths that will multiply the future, they will attain the sum of life.

Some of the most challenging aspects of life at Weaver are found in the classes offered by the Science Department. Who can possibly forget dissecting frogs in biology, or running through fields of daisies and thorns to catch an elusive butterfly! The rewarding experiences gained in laboratory and in class may not be measured in grams or liters; instead, they must be measured by the way in which Weaver graduates make use of the "scientific" method which they learned here.

MATHEMATICS DEPARTMENT: (Bottom) Mrs. Alice Burstein, Mrs. Marie Gubitz, Mrs. Patricia Kowzowski. (Top): Mr. Joseph Beidler, Miss Sheila Turner, Mr. Bradford Ames, Mr. Robert Tetreault, Mr. Curtis Manns, and Mr. Samuel Bronstein (chairman).

VOCATIONAL COURSES PREPARE FOR FUTURE

The practical aspects of preparation for the future are found in the courses offered by the Business, Industrial Arts, and Home Economics Departments. Girls can learn to become efficient secretaries in one of Mrs. Gerard's advance shorthand courses or in Miss Mazner's second year typing class. Business machines, taught by Miss Mazner, is vital for anyone planning to enter the world of business. Filing and general business, as well as practical work experience, are offered to make the Weaver graduate the best secretary.

The Home Economics Department is one of the busiest in the school. Students and teachers flock to Mrs. Ferlini's for rush repair jobs, on buttons, seams, and anything else imaginable. Dressed in her white coat, Mrs. Gammons can be seen in room 334, teaching eager students the fine art of cooking. During fifth period, seniors taking Social and Family Living with Mrs. Gammons have interesting discussions on subjects ranging from family life to child care.

The Industrial Arts Department, located in the annex, offers boys the opportunity to get practical job experience. Courses in auto mechanics prepare students for jobs in the auto industry. Woodworking and mechanical drawing are also put to good use by boys in designing boats for the Regatta.

Because of the diligent efforts of these departments, Weaver students have always been successful in finding jobs in the business world. Whether as an executive secretary or a garage mechanic, the Weaver graduate will always remember the courses which trained him for his job.

BUSINESS DEPARTMENT: (Bottom) Mrs. Jeannine Gerard, Mrs. Gail Lichtman, Mrs. Josephine D'Orsi, Mrs. Elaine Taylor. (Top) Mr. Vincent Husovsky, Mr. Arthur McLaughlin, Mr. Francis Franzoso, and Mr. Theodore Perry.

HOME ECONOMICS DEPARTMENT: Mrs. Elizabeth Gammons and Mrs. Mari Ferlini.

Linda Kershenbaum increases her typing speed while she decreases her typing errors.

GUIDANCE DEPARTMENT COUNSELS STUDENTS

The Guidance Department, headed by Miss Donna Adcock, is the link between Weaver students and the world of college and careers. Until recently, students sat in stifling rooms and whispered to their counselors so as not to be heard by anyone else. In September, 1966, visitors to rooms 125 and 126 were greeted by some long awaited changes. Students happily welcomed the newly installed air-conditioning unit and enlarged sound proofed rooms.

Aided by Mrs. Cassarella, Guidance Department secretary, Mr. Thomas, Mrs. Willey, Mr. Shea, Miss Nelson, Mr. Andrews, and Miss DeBartolo, worked hard to counsel the underclassmen, while Mr. Holland and Miss Belisle handled the senior class. Miss Belisle continuously received requests with "urgent" stamped upon them, while Mr. Holland tried to calm many a distraught, potential draftee.

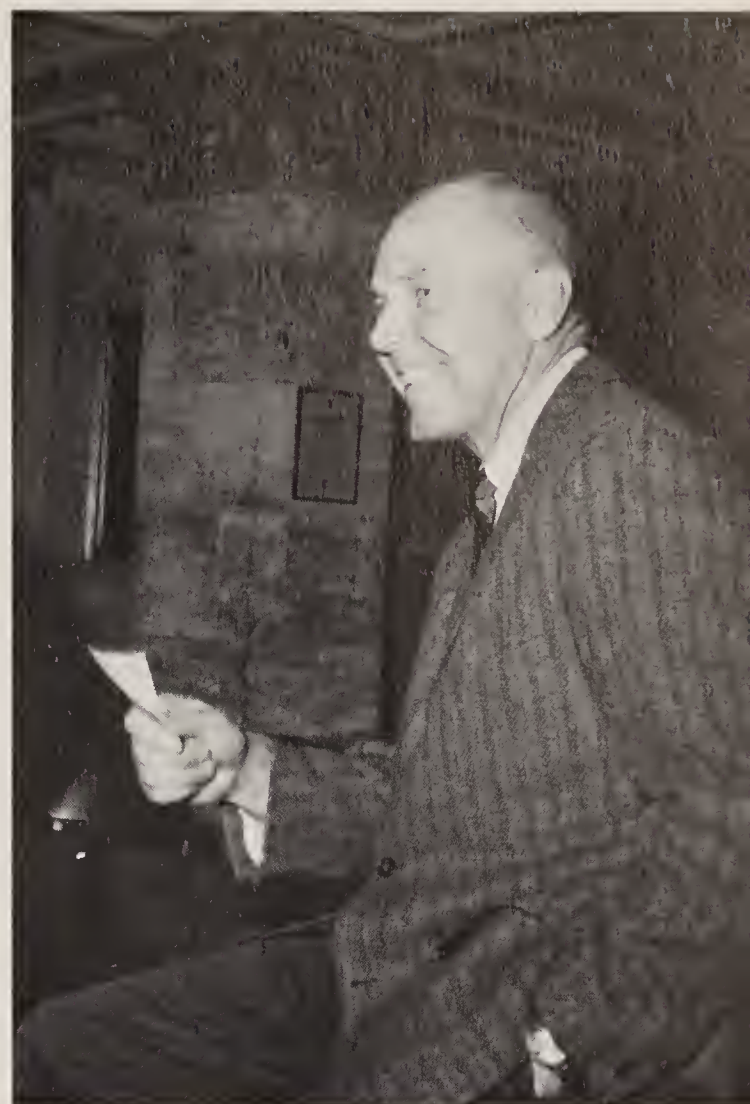

Without the Guidance Department, Weaver students would have no one to whom they could turn for basic academic guidance. Thus, the graduating seniors are grateful to all the counselors who helped guide and direct them through four rewarding years.

EFFICIENCY COMES FROM EVERY NOOK AND CRANNY

Mr. Worth, Work Study coordinator.

People vital to the functioning of Weaver include the cafeteria staff, the office secretaries, and the school nurse. The cafeteria staff, supervised by Mrs. Fiori, is the nucleus of the school for without the great care and careful preparation of lunch, Weaverites would be unable to last through the day.

The office secretaries are also necessary to the normal functioning of school activities. Mrs. Petruvich, Mr. Melrose's secretary, as well as Miss Clafey and Mrs. Huey, are vital to making certain that all the "incidentals" are attended to.

Mrs. Garber, the school nurse, is a very competent woman who has patiently aided the genuinely ill as well as a number of the usual school hypochondriacs.

At 12:45 each day, approximately ninety-seven students depart from Weaver to enter the business world through jobs offered them by the Work Training and Work Study programs. Headed by Mr. Worth and Mrs. Ferguson, these programs have proven successful from the start.

Mr. John Szandrocha, Audio-Visual Aide.

Mr. Timothy Clifford, Social Worker.

PHYSICAL EDUCATION DEPARTMENT: Mrs. Aida Shumey, Mrs. Marilyn Strong, Mr. Colin Wilson, and Mr. Philip Kearney.

FACULTY SERVICES BOTH GYM AND LIBRARY AREAS

When information is needed for reports, term papers, and compositions, the Weaver library fulfills the needs of students. Miss Sullivan, assisted by Mrs. Prescott is always ready to lend a helping hand to students. The librarians are also available to fulfill the needs of teachers in preparations for their classes.

Mr. John Szandrocha, head of the Audio-Visual Department, helps teachers make classes more interesting for the students as well as helping teachers prepare class programs by way of the overhead projector.

Students in need of special guidance or counseling can always depend on Mr. Timothy Clifford, social worker, for help and understanding in solving their problems. When not strengthening minds in the classroom, Weaverites are strengthening their bodies in gym classes. Mr. Colin Wilson, head of the Physical Education Department, along with the other gym teachers, always works toward making gym classes both enjoyable and beneficial to students.

Miss Lucy Sullivan, Head Librarian.

postscript

The Class of '67 will leave Weaver but their hearts and minds will never forget the school. The many faces have become imprinted on their memories.

Santa Claus brings Christmas Greetings to Weaver students.

ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS

It is my wish to thank the following for their work on the yearbook: Phillip Garbus for his priceless, diligent performance as photographer, artist and layout designer; the Editorial Board for its work on the copy in the senior, activity, and academic sections of the book; and the Business Board, under the management of Russell Kaplan, for arranging the finances and practical details. I extend my sincere gratitude to Miss Kathleen Gallagher and Mr. John Alibrio for their incomparable, unselfish patience with everyone. In addition, I would like to thank Mr. Jack Brown, representative of T. O'Toole and Sons, for being personally instrumental in this publication.

I sincerely hope that this book will symbolize and highlight the best year the Class of 1967 has known.

O. P.

Olivia Pittman symbolizes student dedication.
